5,000 Jam Streets To See Boys Off to Army With Smile

By ALVIN L. KRIEG

With a lump in its throat and a prayer on its lips—but nonetheless a cheery smile and a hearty wave of the hand—Mansfield turned out five thousand strong this morning to bid farewell and Godspeed to two hundred of its sons leaving for service in America's war-time army.

These two hundred young men from the factory and the farm and the office carried with them a warm and unforgettable memory of their old home town—a town they know has them in its heart.

For the five thousand who jammed downtown streets it was just as unforgettable. Their eyes may have been moist as the young men rode away, their heads held high. But when the crowd said goodbye it was with a ring in its voice. with a smile and good cheer There was music, and noise, and excitement.

Departure of this contingent—largest to leave Richland county to date—brought back poignant memories to nearly everyone in the crowd. Many have gone before; many more will go in the weeks and months ahead.

* * *

Many of the mothers in the throng who today were saying goodbye to their sons had said goodbye to their men 25 years ago when they left to serve in another war. A number have seen their sons ride away in earlier groups.

To their lasting credit, let it be said that the mothers in the crowd were brave. There was a quiet dignity about them as they kissed their sons goodbye. The reassuring smiles they displayed to their sons disappeared when the buses rolled away, and they wept openly.

Fathers who seemed unaware of the tears on their own cheeks tried to comfort and cheer their womenfolk Young women who had said goodbye to the men they love, their husband or their sweethearts, waited until the buses had drawn away Then they too dabbed at their eyes and hurried away.

Young boys looked up at their brothers in the buses, and they were proud. They gave awkward but heart-warming salutes.

The entire scene was one of sharp contrast to that presented on previous occasions when groups of inductees left for army reception centers. In the past, the crowds have been slim, made up almost entirely of families and close friends. There has been an atmosphere of hushed silence.

But today there was stirring martial music. Strangers joined with the families and neighbors of the boys going away. Thousands of hands were lifted to wave a message that said "goodbye" and "God bless you." There were cheery greetings,

YOU BET BOYS LIKED SEND-OFF!

Cheery Farewell Makes It a Lot Easier To Leave, They Agree on Departure.

By WILLIAM F. MURRAY

Believe me, those boys who left for camp this morning appreciated the great send-off Mansfield gave them this morning.

"It makes you feel like there's a lot of people rooting for you," was the way most of the 201 Richland county youths expressed it as they climbed into the six big buses which took them to army induction centers.

"I'll feel a lot better remembering Mansfield like this," said Don Kirkpatrick, president of the Junior Association of Commerce, who was headed for Fort Hayes, Columbus.

Of course, even in the middle of all the cheering, the band music and the hearty handshakes, there were a few tears but for the greater part, the boys and

Mansfield Doctors, Dentists Face Early Call To Service

An early call to military service for Mansfield's professional men was seen today with the announcement that all doctors, dentists, and veterinarians will receive questionnaires next week to determine how they can best serve in the nation's war effort.

Announcement of the projected mailing of questionnaires was made in New York, by Major Samuel F. Seeley, director of the procurement and assignment service of the office of defense health and welfare.

Seeley said the army alone needed 16,000 physicians, by Dec. 1. and that the navy would need another 3,000 by the time its planned enlistment was completed

This bears out the disclosure in The News-Journal on March 19 that one out of every two doctors in Mansfield will be lost to civilian practice if the war continues.

The average age limit of physicians in Mansfield is considerably below that in many other cities. It is estimated that half the 55 doctors practicing in the city are under '36.' Somewhat the same situation is true in the ranks of dentists.

PRAISES CITY'S INDUSTRIALISTS

But Dinner Speaker Tells 'Em 'Deeper Digging' Period Remains Ahead.

Mansfield manufacturers were complimented for digging in to solve their problem of converting industry into war production last night but were told that the future will bring a period of even "deeper digging" so the nation will successfully emerge from the war effort.

The message was left them by

Vinson To Call Army, Navy Officials on Ohio Plant Contracts.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Chairman Carl Vinson, (D., Ga.) of the house naval affairs committee today planned to call army and navy officials to tell their side of the story of a Cleveland war plant that paid its president's private secretary $25,000 a year, and treated its employes to watches, $100 bills, free insurance policies and lavish dinner parties

Vinson did not set the date for their appearance. Yesterday the committee heard executives and employes of Jack and Heintz, Incorporated which holds $58,000,000 worth of government contracts for making airplane starters.

The nature of the contracts was not made clear in the testimony but they appeared to be negotiated agreements providing for a unit price of $600 each for starters made for the navy and for $465 for the army. The navy, it was explained, didn't buy as many as the army Committee Counsel Edmund H Toland said the company's books showed that the cost of making the starter was $272

Toland also produced payroll figures which he said showed the company paid out $949,590 in bonuses in 1941. The firm would have made 100 per cent profit, he charged, if large salaries for executives, free lunches and free entertainment were disregarded

He said the navy had reported that it was unable to obtain competitive bids on the Report Nazis Mass on Baltic

Great Britain went on the alert today in preparation for "new campaigns" and a flurry of rumors pointed to Scandinavia and particularly Sweden as a likely new theater of action.

Unconfirmed reports said that Germany was massing forces along the Baltic coast and in Norway but whether as a precaution against a possible British offensive or for a direct move against Sweden was not certain.

London newspapers reported that Sweden has quietly brought her army up to maximum strength by mobilization of reserve classes and that Swedish troops and planes are carrying out extensive maneuvers

There were plentiful signs that a typical war of nerves was being conducted by both sides to mask preparations for coming spring offensives.

A government statement in parliament revealed that a general staff on war production is being set up, headed by the famous economist Sir Walter Layton, and that measures are being taken to co-ordinate United Nations' war output on international basis.

"We are about to see new campaigns starting and we must play our part in them," the spokesman said

Lord Beaverbrook, it was revealed, already has arrived in the United States on a production co-ordination mission.

A further move to strengthen the offensive power of the British army—possibly in preparation for moves against the con-

A FITTING FAREWELL—

An Editorial

THEY'RE OFF TO WAR! Two hundred more Mansfield and Richland county young men left this morning for military training camps to prepare for the great job that lies ahead—preservation of the rights and privileges which are their heritage as Americans.

And the send-off they were given by their thousands of friends who gathered in the early morning to give them a cheery farewell and to wish them Godspeed in their mission, was one that will linger long in their memory—and in the memory of all who witnessed the scene.

There were smiles on the faces of the boys as they caught glimpses of friends through the crowd, acknowledged the call or wave of someone they knew, or gave a cordial handshake to an acquaintance within reach. But there was a solemn moment also, as mother, father, sister, brother, wife or sweetheart said goodbye — and often there was a tear close behind the brave smile with which the soldier boy was sent on his way.

The crowd—five thousand, or more, according to official estimates — the stirring music of the high school band, the assembling of selectees in readiness for departure—the whole impressive occasion was one that tended to bring the reality of war closer to everyone who was there.

Many of the older persons recalled similar scenes in 1917 when fathers of some of the boys who left this morning marched jauntily down Main street to entrain for service in the first World war—and some even had memories of that earlier scene — in 1898 — when Mansfield turned out en masse to cheer the departure of young men who served in the Spanish-American war.

Most impressive, perhaps, as more and more of Mansfield's and Richland county's selectees leave for military service, is the thought that those who remain behind—men and women, young and old—will have increasingly heavy responsibilities, either directly or indirectly associated with the national war effort, and that no task should be considered too heavy, nor any sacrifice too great, that will help those who are called upon to do the actual fighting—in order that this nation may live and to the end that peace may eventually be restored in America and throughout the world.

Goodbye, fellows. We'll be thinking about you, and may the blessing of God rest upon you, wherever you find a place for service to your country.

5,000 TURN OUT TO BID COUNTY BOYS FAREWELL

201 Depart For Army, Knowing Loyal Townsfolks Are Backing Them Up.

cries of "Say so long to the boys at the shop."

Estimates on the size of the crowd varied from 3,000 to 7,500. Those best qualified to judge set the figure at 5,000. But whatever the actual size of the crowd, it demonstrated convincingly that Mansfield had turned out in hearty response to the appeal issued through The News-Journal only yesterday by Earl Saltzgaber, chairman of the Soldiers'-Citizens' committee, for the city to provide its boys a real send-off.

Saltzgaber and other members of the committee were moved and pleased by the city's response. They asked that their sincere thanks be passed along to all who participated in the send-off—and announced that the same plan would be followed every time a contingent leaves in the future.

Arrangements have been made for other bands to participate in future send-offs. The music—familiar marches and patriotic airs, was provided today by the Senior high school band. Hearty applause greeted each number.

Heads were bared as the band played the national anthem a little after 8 o'clock.

Shortly after 7 o'clock the crowd started to gather. Until the last of the six buses pulled out at 8:35 there was a mass of packed humanity in Park avenue west from Main street to Walnut, in Main street in front of the Richland Trust building, in the park at the city square.

At exactly 8:15, the first of the buses rolled away, carrying half of the group from Board 1 on its way to Fort Hayes. At 8:35, the two buses carrying Board 3's contingent drew away from the curb. The groups from Boards 1 and 3 were taken to Fort Hayes, Columbus, as previous groups have been, and those from Board 2 to Fort Thomas, Kentucky, across from Cincinnati.

Of course there were hitches and confusion. But these were due to the unexpected size of the crowd. In the future the buses will be roped off and only the draftees themselves and their families will be admitted inside the roped-off area, Saltzgaber said. More complete arrangements will be made for handling the crowd and the traffic.

Traffic officers under the direction of Traffic Commissioner Frend C. Boals were on duty and considering the unexpected size of the crowd, did an excellent job of shunting traffic away from the scene and directing pedestrians.

Prior to climbing into the buses, the selectees visited their respective draft board offices—in the Farmers Bank building, Richland Trust building, and the courthouse, to receive their induction papers. At the same time, they were presented with the gift — made up of a kit, testament, and service book, which is provided each boy entering service by the Soldiers-Citizens committee.

Windows of office buildings were filled with onlookers. Some watched the scene from windows and balconies of the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

There was confetti thrown—the Lions club had gathered up all it could find in the city, and this was tossed on the draftees by those close to the bus doors. Factory whistles were blown at 8 o'clock—the time set for the buses to leave. Automobile horns added to the noise as the buses proceeded west on Park avenue before swinging north.

It was, of course, not an occasion for merriment, and there was none of the hi-de-ho that marks some community gatherings. But cheers went up for the boys, and smiles on thousands of faces flashed a message to them.

Yes, it was something to warm the cockles of one's heart.

The five thousand folks who got up a little early to take part are mighty glad today that they did. They'll be there again, it's a safe bet, and chances are that plenty more of their fellow townsmen will be along with them.

ASHLAND—The court of appeals overruled one item and sustained another in the suit of Clyde O. and Fay E. Scobey vs. H. W. Fair, administrator of the estate of Elma Fair, appealed from the Ashland county probate court on exceptions to the administrator's final account. The appeals court held that the estate of Elma Fair must pay $693.85 to the Division of Aid for the Aged and not the interest of H. W. Fair as found in probate court. The court of appeals confirmed a finding of $90 for rent to be accounted for by the administrator in his account.

big future military operations."

The Nazi broadcast quoted Captain Hideo Hiraide, Japanese naval spokesman, as declaring:

"It seems that since the capitulation of the Netherlands East Indies, the situation has reached a turning point and that Japan is on the defensive and the Anglo-American powers on the offensive.

"Defense lines do not, however, lead to victory . . . Japan must continue its offensive."

Captain Hiraide acknowledged that the question of transport to supply Japan's far-flung invasion armies was becoming difficult—a statement underlined by official Washington announcement that U. S. submarines had sunk three more ships and damaged three others in Japanese waters.

In Australia, Gen Douglas MacArthur busily mobilized the vast island continent's defenses against an expected Japanese invasion attempt and indicated that he would follow a policy of keeping the public informed on developments.

"My main purpose is not to suppress news but to get news for you," the United Nations generalissimo told correspondents.

There was little actual news, however, as Allied fliers continued to hold Japan's sea-borne forces at bay in the battle for the approaches to Australia.

Japanese bombers in two waves again struck at Port Moresby in southern New Guinea island, 300 miles across the Torres Strait from Australia, it was announced, but information was lacking on the progress of Japanese invasion columns reported marching down the Markham valley toward Port Moresby.

In the battle of Burma, Chinese headquarters reported "vigorous fighting" was raging only seven miles south of Toungoo, the Chinese-defended left anchor of the Allied line in Central Burma, with Chinese troops attacking with bayonets against Japanese, Thai and traitor Burmese forces.

This indicated that the invaders had advanced more than 20 miles since last Friday, when fighting was reported in the vicinity of Pyu, 30 miles below Toungoo.

Chinese headquarters said American volunteer fliers struck in "two powerful and simultaneous attacks" on Japanese-held air fields in neighboring Thailand, countering heavy attacks by the reinforced Japanese air force.

In India, Mohammed Ali Jinnah, leader of India's minority of 77,000,000 Moslems, told his followers that they must reserve judgment on proposals brought to India to Sir Stafford Cripps and must be prepared "to resist until we are all dead" against any plan detrimental to the interest of Moslems.

Outnumbered three to one by India's 244,000,000 Hindus, the Moslems are seeking the establishment of separate Moslem and Hindu states before agreeing to help Britain in the war.

Sir Stafford was sent to India by Prime Minister Winston Churchill in an attempt to settle the ticklish problem of India's bitter hatreds and to weld a united fighting front against the threat of Japanese attack.

Washington's list of Japanese ships destroyed or damaged was boosted to 118 by a navy communique last night.

The navy announced that three merchantmen totaling 18,000 tons had been sunk, a destroyer or anti-submarine vessel was probably sunk and two 2,000-ton freighters were damaged by U. S. submarines in waters of the island empire.

A Chungking communique declared the Chinese inflicted more than 200 casualties in one encirclement action in Burma and "also captured large quantities of Japanese military supplies and equipment." A delayed dispatch from Chinese field headquarters said Pyu itself changed hands twice in 48 hours, but the drive had ended with the Chinese entrenched.

A Domei dispatch indicated the Japanese had gained a foothold in the Solomons islands, extending their line of bases above Australia about 150 miles eastward from Rabaul, New Britain.

Bluejackets were declared to have hoisted the empire's naval ensign over Buka island after landing at Carola Harbar March 10.

Japan's imperial headquarters said important Allied military facilities were destroyed in repeated aerial attacks upon areas from the Solomons to the Bay of Bengal during the past week.

MacArthur Promises Truth About War

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia—(U.P.)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur said today that he and the United States government were going to tell the American public the truth about the war in the southwest Pacific "so they can summon all their confidence, all their determination, all their purpose, in the support of the war effort."

In a statement remarkable for its frankness and its grasp of the broad fundamentals of the war situation, MacArthur appealed for the aid of the press.

He said that newspaper correspondents were one of the most valuable components of a modern army and that he needed the help of correspondents. "Without it," he added, "we can not get the maximum out of the situation. We need the maximum in order to win."

starter because of the firm's exclusive patents and that the company had refused to lower its prices.

William S. Jack, founder of the company, testified that the firm holds no patents but has applied for some.

Jack said he started his company in 1939 with a $100,000 investment but told the committee he spent $500,000 in "research and development." He said in 1941 he drew $145,854 in salaries and bonuses.

In addition to bonuses, each of the firm's 1,300 workers received late in 1940 a watch, a $100 bill, and $2,500 insurance policy. On the last Saturday of each month, the company gave a dinner party for its workers at the Carter hotel in Cleveland which Jack estimated cost around $2 a plate.

The company, he said, had a closed shop contract with its workers under which they worked two 12-hour shifts. For the first eight hours they were paid straight time. For the next four, time and a half. All over 12 hours as well as Saturday work drew double pay.

Harry E. Yoxtheimer, assistant comptroller, who formerly worked for the army air corps at Dayton, O., for $1,800 and $2,300 a year, said the company hired him at $3,600 and later he received increases to $4,200 and $4,800. After he had worked for 46 days he received a $1,000 bonus. He told the committee he was "taken by surprise."

Adeline Bowman, the firm's private secretary, testified that her salaries and bonuses for 1941 totaled $39,356 and she has received $18,295 this year. Her salary was raised from $5,000 a year to $25,000 in December, 1941, payroll records showed.

She said she took dictation, typed letters and had other duties constituting "good hard loyal work."

Along with $60,000 in securities, she said she invested her 1941 income in insurance to "take care of my old age."

Tom Collins, Kansas City newspaper columnist and humorist, who spoke to the 350 members and guests of the Manufacturers club at their 23rd annual meeting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Collins did not deliver his message with dry statistics or by relating the highly technical statements of economic experts. He deftly mixed humor and philosophy in such a manner that his audience could feel the importance of the "little things" which they must do each day to carry out big programs.

Collins complimented Mansfield on overcoming the "mental inertia" connected with getting new starts and emphasized the need for a sustained industrial effort to win the war.

Following his talk, Paul R. Tappan, retiring president, announced that Lewis F. Hartman, vice president and secretary of the Hartman Electrical Manufacturing company, had been elected president for the next year.

A. L. Allen, personnel director of the Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company, was named vice president. John G. Routzon, secretary-manager of the Chamber of Commerce, is secretary for the club.

Tappan gave the president's report on activities of the club during the past year, listing the many defense programs which the club sponsored and helped arrange.

Listed as the more important pieces of business considered during the past year were the proposed dredging of Rocky Fork creek; arranging the two defense caravans to aid area manufacturers to get contracts; the establishment of the payroll deduction method for the purchase of defense bonds and stamps by employes; the distribution of War Production Board bulletins, and sponsoring "Training Within Industry" and other vocational training programs to create a skilled labor reservoir in the Mansfield area for defense work.

Paul M. Eliot, chairman of the Richland county defense bonds sales committee, made a short talk in which he reported that Richland county had been among one of the first to establish a payroll deduction system for the purchase of stamps in all plants employing at least 500 workers and urged other smaller companies to follow suit.

Among those seated at the speaker's table were Robert C. Remy, Chamber of Commerce president; S. Glen Vinson, retiring vice president of the Manufacturers club; Mayor W. J. their relatives and friends made the departure a happy one.

The draftees were loaded down with cigarets, candy and countless gifts as they made their way through the packed throng surrounding their buses.

"I'll remember this for a long time," said Paul Cline, 186 East First street, as he boarded his bus en route to Fort Thomas, Newport, Ky.

Of course, the draftees didn't have any idea how the boys preceding them to camp felt in leaving without any public send-off but they were sure they liked this one, and were almost unanimous in their request that those coming after them get the same "grand treatment."

The departure of John McNamara, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John McNamara, 37 Glenwood boulevard, marked the entrance of the last of three brothers into armed service. Edward and Robert McNamara preceded John in the draft. Mrs. Elizabeth Geyer, John's grandmother, is a Gold Star Mother, having lost a son in World War No. 1.

Vernon Trease, leaving with Board 3, lives out on Mansfield R. D. 5. "Naturally I didn't expect all of my friends to be able to get into Mansfield so early in the morning to see me off," said Trease," and I felt pretty blue. But it makes me feel swell to think that so many people cared to wish us luck."

"I had been down several times to see some of my buddies leave before," said Lester Cox, 505 Daisy street," and it seemed too bad that they didn't know how the city apreciated their sacrifice. I know that I and all the fellows going with me want you to keep this send-off program going. It's great for morale and don't let them kid you about it."

William Carter, Mansfield R. D. 6, thought the public send-off was "a swell idea."

"You know a lot of these fellows had the feeling that they were being pushed into a bus and sneaked out of town before most of you other people even got up. Those little things can hurt. This way we know that folks are with us and it makes it a whole lot easier."

Friends clambered on the sides of the six buses exchanging last minute handshakes, shouting encouragement and handing gifts to the draftees.

One of the draftees summed up the feeling of his companions when he said "Now Mansfield seems like a place worth coming back to, rather than just a place you'd rather not leave."

There have been frequent complaints in the past—particularly during the battle of France—that lack of intimate collaboration between the RAF and British ground forces seriously hampered British land operations.

The new army wing, it was said, will include air borne and paratroops and glider forces.

On the British home ground plans were announced for training of the populace in guerrilla war tactics, similar to those employed in Russia to enable them to deal effectively with German invasion forces in event the long heralded Nazi attack on the British Isles should actually be made.

The German air force added its bit to the heralding of the new spring war season in the west. It heavily attacked a British southeast coast town in what apparently was the most concentrated raid on a British objective since last May.

What do I do?
— to protect my tire tubes?
Don't keep spare tubes in with the tools. Store them carefully—they're easy to injure.
Test in water before putting in tire to "spot" any slow leaks. To be sure tube "sets" evenly in tire, inflate, deflate then re-inflate.
Never put tube in tire until all dust, grit, etc., is removed—and rust is scraped from rim. These will wear tube—may cause puncture.
If grease or oil gets on tube remove it promptly with gasoline. We're sure you'll find this care pays.

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH. S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—One reason for some of the confusion, caterwauling and mutual heel-biting at Washington is becoming very apparent. Some of the big shots have wearied and worried their nerves into frayed ends.

Part of this is because there have been so many lightning changes in responsibilities and authority without warning and with more changes threatened every minute. Part of it is due to faulty organization, uncertainty of authority and poor selection of subordinates.

Gen Johnson

Most of all this boils down to a single cause—men attempting to do too much in too few hours with too little competent assistance.

These ambitious gents have run themselves ragged. They are breaking down physically and nervously. Between fits of exaltation and dips into despair, they just aren't normal.

B. M. Baruch recalled to my mind something that I had forgotten. With a couple of brilliant exceptions, the men of the 1918 war industries board were all well under 50 years of age. Baruch was 45. The present writer was 33.

In the preceding year of trial and error and cut-and-try, the older men—some very brilliant ones—had been forced by medical advice to give up and go home The exceptions were organizational experts with unusual qualities of endurance who knew how to divest themselves of detail.

Today the president is an example of another kind of gifted character who can stand the gaff. He once said to this writer:

"During my waking, working hours I give the best I have in me and neglect as little as possible. When time comes for rest and sleep, I can reflect that I could not have done better if I had it all to do over again, except for hindsight which simply does not come at the same time as the problem. There is nothing left for me but to close my eyes and I do it and am asleep. I have no time for worry."

His mother once confirmed this to me in very similar words

It is a rare quality. Not one man in 10,000 has it. These are the reasons why so many men in important jobs in the emergency war organization are fretful, irritable, don't get their work done and also why there is so much back-biting and lack of cooperation.

This is not necessarily a permanent condition It tends to cure itself as the organization "shakes itself down." It is doing that now. Every recent step of reorganization has been in that direction

The country has not been shown enough of it to see the far-reaching effects of the recent army reorganization — especially of the supply side under Gen. Somervell.

He has very full authority under Nelson's very general supervision over the procurement of all kinds of supplies by the army bureaus and of the men who are to do the work They must do it as Somervell says—or else, and he is no sissy-britches in making the "or else" mean comething

If the navy goes as far, then Nelson's job will be reduced to a minimum because, with a joint army-navy munitions board ironing out by conference and agreement all but irreconcilable conflicts, Nelson will have only the few toughest nuts to crack and can devote himself to his real job.

That job is not to do any purchasing at all, but to ration scant supplies where they are most needed and to see that army, navy, lease-lend and the maritime commission get what they need of both supplies and facilities, exactly when and where they need it.

That plus conversion of plants, conservation of material, substitution of plentiful for scant materials and a care for the civilian population is Nelson's job—that and very little else beside.

It is exactly that job that he hasn't as yet been able to do, partly because he doesn't seem fully to understand how to do it and partly for all the other reasons stated here.

OPA PROMISES PRICES WILL BE KEPT IN CHECK

Announces Price Ceilings, Plan To Hit 'Scarcity' Inflation, Profiteering.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The American public had the assurance of the office of price administration today that "enforced scarcity" of supplies during the war will not be permitted to result in the "twin evils of profiteering and inflation."

The announcement was made by Acting Price Administrator John E. Hamm in connection with a series of orders establishing maximum retail price ceilings on new typewriters and seven major household appliances.

"The public shall not be compelled to submit to the unreasonable and inflated prices at retail simply because supplies are short," Hamm said.

Price ceilings were established on typewriters, new household mechanical refrigerators; new household vacuum cleaners and attachments; new domestic heating and cooking stoves and ranges; new domestic washing and ironing machines; new radios and phonographs.

Stop-production orders previously were issued by the war production board in the cases of refrigerators, washing and ironing machines, radios and phonographs and the industries directed to convert to war production. Curtailment orders were issued in regard to the other articles.

In addition to setting maximum prices at retail, the orders also apply at the wholesale level, and, in the cases of vacuum cleaners and new typewriters, place a ceiling over manufacturers' prices for the first time.

The regulations on washing and ironing machines, radios, phonographs and stoves are 60-day "temporary orders" and peg prices at the level of March 19. The price ceiling on new typewriters was established at the level of March 5, the day before WPB "froze" all typewriter sales.

County Clerk Howard Wenning had no idea there was so much "home-made" ammunition used in the county until he began issuing federal permits for the use and sale of explosives. The law applies to sportsmen who use muzzle-loader guns in the style of Daniel Boone, and Wenning has already issued permits to a number of the marksmen who prepare their own ammunition. Any person who sells, buys, or uses gun powder or any explosive must have a permit which is issued only after he has proved his citizenship and explained satisfactorily why he needs explosives.

Many Mansfielders were thrilled to see the 26-ton army bomber which was forced down at the Mansfield municipal airport Sunday noon but airport officials aren't too anxious for a repeat performance. Mayor W. J. Locke said today that the visit by the bomber cost the city about $250. The mayor explained that was his estimate of the damage caused by the heavy bomber when it tore up deep furrows in the muddy runways of the port.

ENDORSES CHANGE IN LABOR LAW

House Speaker Approves Plan To Pay Time-and-Half After Longer Week.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Speaker Sam Rayburn said today he believes the basic work week of war industry workers should be extended to 48 hours.

He endorsed a resolution adopted by a Dallas, Tex., mass meeting, which recommended that time-and-a-half overtime pay be required for work in excess of 48 hours a week. The wage-hour law now requires overtime pay for work in excess of 40 hours a week.

Rayburn's endorsement of the 48-hour week came as house members argued whether to act on restrictive labor legislation before or after a contemplated Easter vacation.

The house appeared determined to vote on a bill by Rep. Howard W. Smith, D., Va., despite strong administration opposition. The bill would outlaw the closed shop and the 40-hour week in war industries and limit profits to six per cent of the cost of a contract.

War Production Chief Donald Nelson appears before the house naval affairs committee today to repeat his statement to a senate committee last week—that enactment of restrictions such as embodied in the Smith bill is not needed now and will not increase production

Nelson told the senate committee that he believed "incentive" wages should be offered labor to speed war production, but said then and again yesterday before the CIO leaders that double time for work on Sundays and holidays should be abandoned. A CIO executive board may consider the double time for Sunday issue today but is expected to leave the decision to individual unions.

Meanwhile, the procedure situation was made more uncertain by the statement of Sen. Tom Connally, D., Tex., that he would call up immediately his bill for "freezing" labor relations in strike-bound war plants and for seizing such plants.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking for Myself.

SOMETIME when Broadway is casting a real fighting suffragette, a votes-for-women-to-heck-with-the-men gal who scolds, orates, threatens, smashes conventions and winds up getting exactly what she wants, I should like to see Katharine Hepbur get the part.

Kilgallen

Of course, it would be type casting of the easiest kind, and no credit to the producer, but I think it would be more fun to watch than Katie the ingenue or Katie the penitent young wife.

The Hepburn girl must be just about the personification of what early feminists were trying to achieve

Her record in Hollywood, let alone in the theater, is enough to make her the patron saint of lasses who got tired of toadying to men and mores. She went out to the land of glamour and yes-girls and elaborate pretense and thumbed her nose at the whole setup. She retained her Connecticut-Park avenue accent, refused to be sweet to anyone, remained doggedly intellectual, broke appointments, talked up to the awesome producers sitting behind their Mussolini desks and apologized to nobody.

* * *

The story of her sale of "Woman of the Year" to Louis B. Mayer on her own financial terms and with the provision that she get Spencer Tracy to play opposite her—this before "Woman of the Year" was more than a bare outline by Michael Kanin and Ring Lardner, jr.—is one that has few parallels in the history of Hollywood glamour girls.

But then, Katie has few parallels. She is, as I've said before, the only woman I ever saw in Twenty One in pants She apparently is so modern as to be unhappy without a television set, because when she rented Edgar Bergen's home on the coast for six weeks she had one installed

Bergen is the only one I've ever known to get the better of Katharine in an argument, and that might be because his girl manager, Mary Hanrahan, is something of a feminist herself. Kate and Mary clashed when Kate wanted to build an outdoor fireplace in the patio of the house, and was all ready to lay the bricks with her own beautiful hands. But she didn't. She lost that one

She can afford to, though. So far, the score is all on her side and the winnings are all in her (pants) pocket.

* * *

If I were among those in jurisdiction at the Stage Door canteen I'd insist that all those civilians who try to "crash" — although they're plainly told it's only for men in uniform — be admitted But made to wash dishes . . As a veteran Sabbath-walker along Theater Row in the days when Sunday was a day of rest in the theater, I am jolted a little by the playhouse activity that now makes the entertainment belt as noisy on Sunday as it is in on Saturday

I approve of Sunday performances in the interests of business and of those who can't get to the theater on any other day, but it does seem a little sad that the theater can't have at least a once-a-week rest, if only to give the producers time to have the chewing gum scraped off the sidewalks in front of the showhouses.

It seems only logical to me that if Mayor LaGuardia is going to close down the burlesque theaters and make this a pure town he ought to shut the dime-a-dance palaces, the lurid out-of-the-way cinema houses specializing in "sensational" films, and other places of cheap and possibly inartistic amusement, and make it really a pure town.

LAUNCH TREE PROJECT SOON

Sports Organization To Plant Eight Square Miles In Area of Charles Mill.

Working with farmers in the Charles Mill reservoir area at Mifflin, the Richland County Fish and Game Protecuve association will launch a reforestation project April 1 in an eight-mile-square area just north of the reservoir, according to Gordon H. Ensminger, head of the sportsmen's association.

The project calls for the planting of from 10 to 50 thousand trees along creeks and ditches which feed the artificial lake, to help check the flow of soil into the lake during heavy rains.

Ensminger said trees, including pines, poplars, and several varieties of hardwoods, will be planted along all streams which feed the Blackfork creek and overlands adjacent to the reservoir.

The county association's reforestation committee will supply the trees to farmers and land-owners in the area free of charge Other sportsmen's groups in the county will assist with the distribution and planting of the trees, Ensminger said. The planting is expected to be completed by the end of May.

Farmers near the lake were asked to contact the Charles Mill Sportsmen's association or the Richland County Fish and Game Protective association as soon as possible to learn how many trees will be available for their land.

The project, major activity of the fish and game association for the year, will be started in April because that month has been designated as National Conservation month.

CONSERVE WATER, SOIL PLEA OF BROMFIELD AT GARDEN MEETING

"Civilization goes down the dram when soil and water go down the dram," Author-Farmer Louis Bromfield told his audience at the Mansfield Public library last night.

Speaking on "Conservation and Gardening," at an open meeting sponsored by the Mansfield Garden club, Bromfield pointed to Ohio's fast receding water table and predicted that in the next 50 years the state may be "shockingly poor" unless immediate steps are taken to conserve the water and soil supply.

Pointing out that the water table in Ohio has receded 40 feet in the past 25 years, Bromfield called attention to the situation in several industrial centers in the sate where factories are solely dependant upon adequate water supply for their very existence In these areas, he said, there can be no question of expanding industries for defense purposes for the low supply makes any expansion impossible

"You must keep building soil all the time," said the speaker emphasizing the necessity of keeping the soil well fertilized and cultivated.

He spoke of the American tendency to till a farm in one locality without enrichening the land until the soil refused to yield crops and then move on to another locality. Because of this, Bromfield said, not 10 per cent of the American farmers are as good as the European peasant who has not had the American's advantages but is forced to make the best of what he has because there is no chance of getting other land.

"If you help nature a little she will respond marvelously," Bromfield said, citing some of the methods that have been used at his Malabar Farm, methods that have been the means of keeping water on the place He stressed the fact that the same thing can easily be done over the state of Ohio.

He cited the area in the Muskingum Conservancy program as the best-known example where vast returns were obtained from very little expenditure. The project cost $40,000,000, he said, but it paid for itself in a single year in that there was no flood damage the first year when the project was scarcely completed.

In connection with gardening, Bromfield spoke of the back-to-the-land movement that is now in progress and said that in Richland county, like everywhere else over the country, factory workers and white collar men are seeking a small piece of ground where they can raise a living and have some security.

Mrs. Louis J. Ott introduced the speaker.

How come that whenever a congressman gets a lot of mail expressing common sense ideas he thinks there's a conspiracy afoot?

Word comes that the "Crack-a-Jap" cocktail is being popularized in a number of cities—a glass of water and a defense stamp for a dime.

Research shows that the average milk bottle is good for 35 round trips—so those seen shattered on streets and sidewalks must have been tempting fate once too often.

Nelson's Views On Double-Time Pay

THE PEOPLE of the United States will be required to pay the costs of war and it is quite natural, therefore, that everybody should be interested in how their money is being spent.

A large part of the total cost will go to the payment of wages to workers in war industries and there is an appearance of general agreement that these workers should be as well paid as in peace-time employment, but that they should not take advantage of a national emergency to gain wage increases beyond the amount involved in added living costs.

If, as is being contended by President Roosevelt and some of his official associates, the war can be won without disturbing the 40-hour a week working maximum, with time and a half for overtime, that will be an accomplishment unknown to history, but, in any event, it seems that national leaders wish to try it—at least until "conditions become worse."

The matter of double pay for Sunday and holiday work, however, is viewed in a different way and Production Chief Donald M. Nelson has asked labor organizations to suspend this feature of their contracts "for the duration."

This is in accord with earlier announced determination to put basic war production on a seven-day, three shift schedule, utilizing all 168 hours of each week, and in order to do this fairly to all workers it is necessary to treat all days alike—Saturdays, Sundays and holidays included.

Thus far, in spite of desperate needs, production of war materials has fallen far short of what it must become, and quickest possible adoption of around-the-clock operation of industries working on war equipment contracts should be made the goal of employes and employers alike—for now is the time that production and transportation speed will save lives by shortening the war.

When Loose Tongues Wag

WHILE emphasis is being placed on censorship, and the importance of not revealing military secrets, either in print or by word of mouth, it is being noted by observers on the West Coast that bar-rooms provide an excellent place for spies to gather information.

In San Francisco a hush-hush gesture, known as a "civilian salute" has been originated. It is given by placing the closed right hand at the chin, with the index finger pointing straight up across the lips.

After tracing most of the military gossip to public drinking places the navy posted warning notices, held classes of instruction for bartenders and threatened to declare offending taverns "out of bounds" for sailors.

Those who are familiar with the loose talk ordinarily indulged in by persons under the influence of intoxicants will realize the danger of entrusting secrets to anyone likely to take even a few drinks—and this attains much greater importance when the secrets are of a military nature in time of war.

Switzerland's New Stand

SWITZERLAND is reported to have arrested 19 Nazi agents. If this be true, it is a favorable sign. Though the Swiss yield to no one in courage, it is only common sense to admit that against modern weapons the bravest man, unless as thoroughly equipped, can make no headway. Heretofore the Swiss have preserved their neutrality by mobilizing their army and making it plain that in defense of their country they would die, to the last man. While Hitler could undoubtedly conquer them, it would be a costly enterprise and might well drag on for an embarrassing length of time.

In their turn the Swiss, wishing to avoid unnecessary offense, have discouraged anti-Nazi attacks in the press, and have generally watched their step with the utmost care. Situated next door to Germany, they should, before almost anyone else, be able to detect cracks in the Nazi structure. This bold suppression of the Nazi movement indicates their belief that just now self-defense is not too dangerous.

Restrictions Teach Economy

FORCED ECONOMIES are sometimes blessings in disguise. Many manufacturers are now finding this out. In the past they have been tempted to outdo one another in such details as fancy packaging. Consider two manufacturers of some article with much the same qualities and both selling at the same price. To get the better of his rival, one manufacturer puts up his product in a specially attractive wrapper. Not to be left behind, Manufacturer No. 2 follows suit. They are now both where they were before, except that each has added the fancy wrapper to his costs. At best, this process is wasteful. At worst, it means bankruptcy.

Now war-enforced saving is cutting out these frills. Seller and buyer both benefit, and nothing essential has been lost.

Dream of Empire Ends

THOUSANDS of Italians, mostly women and children, have been removed by the British from Ethiopia. There is no safety for them otherwise, now that this former Italian province has regained its freedom.

Thus ends the Italian attempt to build an empire in East Africa. Starting with a few impoverished streaks of boiling hot desert along the Red sea, Italian East Africa attained respectable dimensions with the conquest of Ethiopia in 1936. Within five years this ambitious attempt has come to a miserable end. The attempt is not likely to be repeated.

Opposition To Sales Tax Lessens

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—There is probably more to be said in favor of a sales tax at the present moment than at any time in this country's history. Incidentally, the most formidable group of opponents the sales tax ever had, the large store owners, have virtually flopped over to its favor, while the chief argument against it—the one which has always moved President Roosevelt—has disappeared for the duration.

Let's consider the president's previous objection. It was that a sales tax was not only a tax on people least able to afford it, but that it cut down consumption, and hence helped to restrict employment. That is, in discouraging people from buying things they did not literally HAVE to buy, it prevented the manufacturer and sale of those things, and thus prevented people who could have earned a living by making and marketing those things from getting jobs or holding them.

This argument vanishes into thin air for the duration. The government is ANXIOUS for people not to buy things they do not HAVE to have. The government wants this for two reasons. First, it wants to limit all non-war production as far as possible. Second, it wants the savings effected by the people NOT buying those things translated into government bonds.

* * *

THERE is no question of employment—for the duration. The government needs the work of every man and woman possible for war production. It will continue to need them, more and more, so long as the war lasts.

Thus in so far as a sales tax operates to curtail buying of non-essentials—and perhaps even some things that are ordinarily regarded as essentials—it is all to the good. It does not produce unemployment. It contributes to the conversion of peace-time production to war effort.

But what must be considered here is the effect of all this AFTER the war. This does not mean that anything that will help in the war should be stopped because of worry about its later effects. But it does mean that congress should consider what steps must be taken immediately after hostilities are over.

* * *

WHEN this war ends, whether soon or late, and assuming of course that we win the war, for otherwise nothing will make any difference, we are going to be faced with a terrific and almost inconceivable debt. So taxes must continue at a rate which will hold down improvement in our standards of living.

BUT—when that time comes there will be a need for every possible encouragement to employment—to greater national income so as to spread the tax burden thinner. So it might well be that the thing to do about the sales tax would be to eliminate it the moment hostilities stop, and the swing back to normal from the war effort sets in.

There will be a magnificent market, with the public starved of things it wanted during the emergency eager to buy. But there will be MILLIONS of men returning to private employment, not only from the army and navy, but from industry engaged in war work.

This word "millions" in connection with returning soldiers was mentioned by the writer a few months ago, and the sneering comments were legion. No one doubts it any longer.

And they must have jobs.

"Terrible" Sidewalks.

Editor News-Journal:

I want to commend the editorial regarding the sidewalk ordinance, for the following reason.

I was born and raised on Crouse street, which was named after my grandfather, a Mansfield pioneer, and my father was born and raised on the same street. I still live in the old family home and have spent considerable money to repair it and make it a credit to the street and city, but most of the old-timers who owned property on Crouse street have passed on and their homes sold to investors who rent them and are not particular what condition they are in as long as they get their rent money, so they leave the sidewalks in terrible condition.

I have tried for several years to get something done, but so far nothing has happened. Last year the mayor advised me they had no sidewalk funds, so they could not notify the owners to do anything for fear, if they refused to act after being notified, the city would have to take over, which could not be done because of lack of money.

They wanted me to believe there was no such ordinance, although two former city solicitors and a former mayor advised me there was, and I have been under that impression most of my life.

Have you any idea of what a taxpayer should do to get something done that laws require to be done but that public officials don't seem to feel they are required to do?

Timely Editorial

Well Worth Knowing.

Thousands of women and girls are receiving training in first aid. Many of them doubt whether the knowledge they acquire ever will be used in service of their country, for the possibility that any particular locality will be bombed seems remote to most Americans at this stage of the war.

But these homemaking folks may be assured that their skill is good preparation even if war never comes within 2,000 miles, for home is not always a safe place even in peace times. Accidents that occurred in homes killed 32,000 persons in 1941. Besides, more than 4,700,000 home accidents caused painful injuries short of death.

So, as the season approaches for climbing stepladders to wash windows and clean cupboards, it is well to have mother and the girls provided with bandages and liniment and schooled in knowing what to do and what not to do when a member of the family takes a tumble and needs to be hustled to bed or to the hospital. —Detroit News.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

Why Call It a "Board?"

Between the piece of timber that we call a board and a group of people also so-called — such as a board of trade and the like—there would not seem to be any association.

Association, however, there is; in fact, the two words are identical, the connection being the line of the old wooden table.

This is how it started.

The word "board," stemming from the Anglo-Saxon bord, soon acquired an expansive significance, being applied to things allied to its intrinsic sense—a piece of wood—as to a ship (which was made of wood), a table, the meals served at the table, and to those who sat around it for the purpose of transacting public or private business.

Learn Jap Sub Prowled Around In Pearl Harbor and Escaped Unseen

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—One amazing incident of the Pearl Harbor attack can now be told. Already announced in the Roberts report was the fact that a small Japanese submarine was sunk off the entrance of Pearl Harbor at 6:33 a. m., about one hour before Jap airplanes came over.

The submarine has since been raised, and its navigation chart and log, translated into English, showed a remarkable voyage.

The submarine had actually made a complete tour inside this vital naval base, had escaped unseen, and the captain had noted the location of each U. S. vessel together with the time he passed it.

The chart showed the Jap sub had arrived off the entrance of Pearl Harbor at 1:50 a. m., Dec. 7—a few hours before the air attack. It waited at the harbor's mouth until 4:20 a. m., when the net was lowered to let a garbage scow out.

Then the sub sneaked in. The commander noted the location of the battleships Utah and the West Virginia—the former announced as sunk. He marked down the positions of twelve destroyers, which he said were huddled close together; also three gunboats, and the cruiser Trenton. In another place he noted "large white man's house."

The chart showed that he passed out of the harbor unseen at 5:25 a. m. and apparently lay off the harbor's mouth for the next hour while he radioed the exact location of each ship to the awaiting Jap air carriers.

About the only thing the Jap commander failed to put in his log was that at 6:33 a. m. he was sunk.

Strange Bedfellows.

ONE of the most needed labor reforms today is a law compelling unions to make annual certified public reports of their finances, just as corporations must report to stockholders and the SEC. Labor's exemption from this rule is one of the chief factors responsible for the dictator rule rampant in some of the biggest unions.

Most labor office holders are opposed to this reform; they are against any proposal to curb their personal power or tenure of office. But there is strong sentiment for it among the union rank-and-file. This column has received hundreds of letters from workers everywhere strongly approving compulsory accountings of the millions they pay in dues.

Probably the big-gun labor leaders by themselves would not be strong enough to prevent enactment of such legislation, but so far they have been able to block it with the potent aid of a strange ally.

This extraordinary bedfellow is the National Association of Manufacturers.

The NAM is the oldest, most tireless and effective foe of organized labor in the U.S.A. Its hand is behind every bill to curb union privileges. But on the issue of public financial reports, the Manufacturers Association sees eye-to-eye with its traditional foe. It is just as violently opposed to this reform as the labor chiefs.

Reason: The manufacturers fear that such a law would be applicable also to them and, apparently, like the labor moguls, they don't want the public to know where the association gets its money and what it does with it.

Unreported Speech.

FOR MORE than a week the halls of congress have echoed with heated demands for legislation abolishing the 40-hour week and prohibiting strikes in war plants. These speeches have been widely reported.

But there was a speech made in the house the other day about which not one line went out. As far as the public is concerned, the speech was never made. But if you'll turn to pages 2687-91 of the Congressional Record you'll find the hottest, most sensational charges heard on Capitol Hill in a long time.

The speaker was Representative Clinton P. Anderson of New Mexico, who was a successful business man before he came to Congress. These are the bombshells — so mysteriously unreported — which he tossed:

1. That the labor crackdown furor was a carefully planned scheme initiated by certain business elements.
2. That its purpose was to divert public attention and anger from the disclosures of huge war profiteering, refusal to convert plants to war production, and the undercover operations of key-placed dollar-a-year men to protect the private interests of industries from which they are drawing big salaries.
3. That Arthur Bunker, head of the WPB Division of Aluminum and Magnesium, is receiving $60,000 a year from a New York banking firm, and that he has prevented the construction of a low-cost magnesium plant while vigorously aiding a high-cost project owned by the giant Dow Chemical Co.

Anderson told the house he was firmly convinced that much of the uproar against labor was instigated by secret organized activity. Editorials were "planted" and congress was deluged with inspired letters demanding drastic measures, he declared.

"The chambers of commerce in my state, and I suppose in yours," said Anderson, "are being harried into special meetings to damn labor for not working 24 hours a day. But what is labor to produce? War goods? Oh, no. To produce enough radios, refrigerators and rayon hose to stock stores throughout the war, from factories that have not been converted to military purposes. Do our people know that today, 3½ months after Pearl Harbor, and for a month and a half yet to come, there are hundreds of vital plants that will not make desperately needed war supplies?

(Copyright, 1942.)

Carlos Davila, ex-president of Chile, says: "You Americans are an amazing people. In any other country, with goods scarce and plenty of money, people would have rushed to buy, prices would have sky-rocketed, and inflation would have ruined you. But you have such confidence in your dollar, you are so calm, that there is no real inflation. It could only happen here."

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The amputations at the Office of Civilian Defense continue. Critics a few weeks ago were calling it a boondoggling centipede with scores of extraneous legs, but it's being rapidly pared down to a four-legged war dog with the single objective of guarding the welfare of the civil population under any wartime catastrophe.

What has happened and is happening to OCD is another example of how democracy works when it gets its dander up and how the "voice of the people" can get a job done effectively.

* * *

THERE were only rumblings when the OCD was coasting along under the direction of New York's Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia. It was apparent that the little dynamo of N. Y. City Hall had spread his tremendous energies too thin, but nobody took it very seriously until Dancer Mayris Chaney's twinkling toes booted the whole business into the critical limelight.

The flood of objections that rolled up against making a sociological enterprise out of what was purely a civilian defense effort not only swept Miss Chaney out of her job, but also washed out Mayor LaGuardia, Mrs. Roosevelt, and a score of lesser OCD officials. Dean James M. Landis, of Harvard, took over. But that didn't stop the criticism.

The storm settled around the physical fitness unit with co-ordinators of everything from archery to yachting, including codeball, horse-shoe pitching, paddle and table tennis, walking, and bag punching. Now that, too, has gone the way of other extracurricular OCD activities—transferred by executive order of the president to Paul V. McNutt's Office of Defense Health and Welfare.

That, say the critics now, is where it belongs. It's important to note that even the severest critics think "It belongs somewhere."

* * *

NEARLY 50 per cent of the registrants of the first draft had to be turned down because of physical defects. In the present draft, including men from 20 to 44, the rate is likely to run higher.

Reports from the entire country are not in, but if the District of Columbia can be taken as any gauge, there are two significant things in recent surveys: (1) The physical defects of potential draftees consisted of 20 per cent dental; 11 per cent venereal disease; eyes, heart, musculo skeletal and feet defects, nervous and mental diseases, 10 per cent each; ear, nose and throat troubles, 5 per cent; and from here on down to minor percentages; and (2) there is only one school in the district that offers more than two hours a week of physical training (exclusive of voluntary sports).

Paul McNutt has under his direction the office of Education. Starting with the schools and working out to older age groups, it is possible that the much maligned physical fitness unit of OCD may become one of the important factors in fitting the nation for a long-time war effort.

A Farmer's Diary

Farm and Shop

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

IN THE doctor's office, I met a farmer friend who lives north of here. Several people were in the waiting room when he came in. I noticed how short of breath he seemed, as he walked from the door to the chair on the opposite side.

This farmer was a spare man, physically short, and beyond middle age. His large fingers and thick, sinewy, calloused palms, showed that he had spent his days in manual labor. His slender honest face afforded me a rare delight that I sat so near.

He lived, he told me, on 40 acres of rolling land. "I'm going far past 60, and to make life better, I gave my son some land to build a home just north of us. When farming starts, the boy'll help, and both together we'll get more out of the land," he said.

"Last week we were hauling a great high load of hay into the barn. The center bulged above both uprights...it was that big. I dodged low in the hay to go below the entrance, but the logs in the loft above caught me in the side just below my arms, and broke my ribs. I stopped the team and somehow rolled over on top of the granary. I thought the light coming through the chinks in the siding was the last light I'd ever see. I'm lucky to be alive, I guess. It'll be a year or more before I can do much farm work."

"Have you always lived on a farm?" I wondered.

"I've always had my home there—but I work most of each day in a city shop. My son and I both work there now. I guess I've spent more working hours in a shop than on the farm, but it doesn't seem that way. I've quit three times—but they always took me back. I like my job—but I like the land, too.

"If I'd rent my land it would soon get too poor to farm, and begin to wash. I like to see crops grow that we've planted ourselves. The old fence row that I clean, smells so good in the spring, and the burning brush is like a tonic. I like to be on the farm when the sap starts running. Seems like the two jobs are a rest from each other—and make a man's life more complete.

"We raise practically all we eat, except sugar and coffee. We live better and things taste better, too. On the farm there's always something new and different—only never again will I ride a big load of hay into the barn."

SOCIETY & CLUBS

WESTINGHOUSE CLUB TO MEET THURSDAY

Mrs. Julia Kiene Will Demonstrate, Show Film on "Vitamized" Cooking; April Menus to Be Distributed.

WIVES and homemakers of Westinghouse employes will hold their second Health for Defense club meeting in the company's auditorium at 2:30 p. m. Thursday. Mrs. Julia Kiene, director of home economics for Westinghouse and originator of the nation's first active Health for Defense program, will be in charge.

Of the 375 wives and homemakers who attended the initial meeting on March 4, 320 of them returned within the next several days to fill in questionnaires and to receive the booklets of menus and recipes for healthful meals to be served during the month of March.

"Vitamized" cooking will be demonstrated by Mrs. Kiene at Thursday's meeting. All kinds of vegetables will be cooked with a minimum amount of water in order to conserve their vitamin content. In order to prove that expensive, new utensils are not necessary for good results, Mrs. Kiene will cook with all kinds of utensils at this meeting.

A technicolor movie showing the advantages of "Vitamized" cooking and the disadvantages of the old-fashioned method of cooking will be shown. The film is divided into two parts: "V-Men" shows laboratory experiments with the two methods of cooking; "V-Women" pictures a typical homemaker cooking the "Vitamized" way in her own kitchen.

It will not be necessary for Health for Defense club members to return to Westinghouse at some future date to secure their booklets of April menus and recipes. Distribution will take place at Thursday's meeting. Wives or homemakers of the company's employes, furloughed workers and men in service, who were unable to be present for the first meeting are urged to attend this one. A copy of the March booklet of plans for healthful meals will be presented them upon request.

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHAT IS THE JOB TO DO?

WHEN you have a specific job to do anywhere in life, it is up to you to accomplish it if you can. In bridge that is represented by the contract in which you find yourself. If you are in a contract of four-odd in some suit, and you are a gamester, you will concentrate all of our resources upon taking the necessary 10 tricks. If the contract, however, is only three-odd, then your first consideration should be to make sure of the necessary nine tricks, not going out of your way to risk being beaten for the sake of extras unless there are special reasons for doing so.

Follow this succession of tricks -diamond A, diamond 5 to the Q, lub 3 to the A, heart 3 bringing he 2, 7 and 10 and club 5 to the

Now you and I—and a kibitzer t the game—knowing West has ne heart A, can see an easy way or South to make an extra trick, iscarding both of his losing ades on the diamond K and J. fe could overtake the club 10 ith the K, use the Q to drop the ist missing trump, then lead a eart toward the K. Thus he could rely get to the dummy to use ne diamond honors for two spade discards, so that his only losing tricks would be one club, one heart and one diamond.

But South could not be sure West had the heart A. If he tried the given line of play and East held it, the dummy could never be re-entered to use the diamond honors at all, and hence there would be two spade losers. So, while in the dummy with the club J, he had to, as a safety play for the contract, lead the diamond K, letting East ruff and himself overruffing with the K. His next lead, of the club 9 to the 10 put him back into dummy, where he was able to use the diamond J for one spade discard. Of course, he then lost a spade and a heart, in addition to the two minor aces, so he made exactly 3-Clubs.

Perhaps we should give West a merit mark for his under-lead of the heart A to the fourth trick, which caused all of the trouble.

Pitfalls of Love

(A sequel to Marriage Meddlers)
By ADELE GARRISON

I had breath for but one word in answer to the driver's assurance, so swift was the sweep of the big armored car around the shores of the beautiful mountain lake which he had told us was called Waramaug.

"Splendid!" I ejaculated, and then summoned my faculties for the instructions which I knew must be given to Gus before we reached Warren.

"Ask him, Gus," I said, "if there is any place in Warren where we can inquire about Thunder Mountain."

"Yes," he said, "there's a general store and gas station, and the man that keeps it knows everybody for 25 miles around."

"Tell him to stop there," I told Gus, "and then listen carefully, while I tell you what must be done."

Gus Gives Orders.

"Okay," Gus answered mechanically, and as mechanically gave Bill the direction I had given him. Then he turned to me inquiringly.

"In the first place Gus," I said, "I must not be seen at the store in Warren, nor must any of you speak to me. You must make the storekeeper believe that for your own reasons you wish to find Professor Diswell."

"Professor—" Gus began, and then stopped.

"I'll tell you about him presently," I said. "Now if you have any difficulty with the storekeeper, show him your Federal badge, pledge him to secrecy, and then get your information.

"On second thought," I said, "you would better show him your badge in the beginning.

Must Demand Secrecy.

"Tell him, I went on, "that your chief wishes certain information which only the old professor can give him, but that your visit to him must be kept secret; that he must mention it to nobody.

"Impress that on him, and"—I hesitated, then went on firmly—"you would better tell him that another armored car which you suspect, but do not know, has passengers who are enemies of the government, will probably stop at the store and inquire for Professor Diswell. They will also ask about us. Tell him to profess ignorance of Professor Diswell's whereabouts, or better still send them in an opposite direction."

Gus Has Good Memory.

I told myself, when he had finished his almost parrot-like repetition, that in Gus a good memory was added to his other valuable qualities.

"Good work!" I commended when he had finished. Now, one last instruction.

"There may be danger if we meet the occupants of that other armored car down at the professor's house. You would better tell the storekeeper that if we come back past his store without stopping, but with the driver sounding his horn and you and Bill waving wildly from the windows, he is to call the state police and have them follow along whichever road we turn into."

Says Spencer Would Agree.

Gus nodded his head in agreement.

"I think your father would say 'okay' to that," he said, "though he usually wants to keep away from cops if he can. But this would be different."

"Yes, it would," I said "Now I will tell you about Professor Diswell. He is a very old man who lives alone except for a servant. I used to know him well, and I am sure that he will talk to me. I will try to get through with the conversation as fast as I can, and we have already arranged what you and I are to do if there is danger. Now I want to be sure that nobody sees me from now until we get to Professor Diswell's home. I would better lie down again, I suppose."

HOROSCOPE

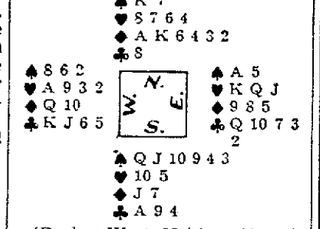
For Wednesday, March 25.

Although this may be a day of very lively activity, initiative and fair progress, yet this success will have to be the result of personal application, determination and strenuous enterprise since there is little to be expected from superiors, employers or others higher up. In fact there may be definite antagonism from them, but this should not be resisted by impetuous, offensive measures.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an unusually lively and aggressive day, with some opportunity for accomplishment of high objectives but by personal cleverness and initiative rather than the encouragement or concrete support of influential personages. In fact, there may be unlooked for opposition from such quarters, but handle the situation with finesse and compromise and not impetuosity or strife.

A child born on this day should be exceptionally talented, versatile and efficient, but its impetuosity, or high nervous tension may provoke those from whom it expects co-operation.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

If West wins the first trick with the heart A, then leads the 2 to the J, what should East do immediately in an effort to beat South's 4-Spades?

Chocolate Peanut Clusters.

8 squares or ½ lb. dipping chocolate
1½ cups roasted red-skinned Spanish peanuts

Melt chocolate over warm water or in a double boiler; add nuts and stir until well coated. Drop from teaspoon on waxed paper and keep in cool place until firm. Makes 2½ dozen clusters. You may decorate the tops with chocolate shot or decorating sugar, if you wish.

Honey Pudding.

½ cp. milk
2 egg yolks
2 tbsps. butter or substitute
2 egg whites
2 cup bread crumbs
½ tsp. ginger
Grated rind ½ lemon

Mix honey and crumbs, add milk, seasonings and egg yolks. Beat mixture thoroughly and add butter or margarine, melted, and egg whites beaten stiff. Steam for about 3 hours in pudding mold which should not be more than three-fourths full. Serves 8.

KINGS ROW + + + + +

By Henry Bellamann

(Copyright, 1942.)

THE STORY: Smalltown Kings Row schoolmates are orphaned Parris Mitchell, 12, who adores his French grandmother, Madame von Eln; pretty Renee, daughter of von Eln estate overseer; "all boy" Drake McHugh; beautiful Cassandra Tower, whose recluse doctor father is own mystery; Louise Gordon, daughter of leading physician. Other characters: lawyer Colonel Skeffington, banker Curley, editor Miles Jackson. Cassandra plans birthday party, social power Mrs. Gordon decides Louise shall have one same day, Cassie's party a failure. Her father withdraws her from school.

CHAPTER IV

After what seemed an interminable spring season, vacation came at last. Parris and Renee on nearly all the way home. His afternoon was different, somehow, from other afternoons it was larger, brighter, gayer, and tomorrow there would be no school.

The great sweeps of orchard back of the house were in full bloom.

"All right," she answered meekly, matching her step to his as best she could.

He dashed about the orchards ... something mad, gathering low branches into his arms and making loud inhalations as he tried to breathe them into himself.

"Aren't they bee-eautiful, Renee? Prettier'n last year."

The months of May and June were rapturously happy. The days were all blue and gold and none of them failed of novelty or excitement. July came in hot and dry.

They walked one afternoon through the groves of young evergreens that stood on the farthest outskirts of the place. Beyond, there was only woods.

They came presently upon a small green pond with spruces and cedars planted in a wide circle about it. The sharp points of the young trees were perfectly mirrored on the still surface.

"Ooh, looky — our pond! We haven't been here since last summer, have we?" Renee ran ahead. Parris walked slowly forward, watching her bright hair as she flung the braids back over her shoulders and sat on the grassy bank with hands clasped about her knees. He decided she was a very pretty girl — prettier than Elsbody — prettier, even, than Cassandra Tower.

"You're my best friend, Renee," he said impulsively.

"Am I? Honestly?"

"Yes, you are. I like you better than anybody."

"I like you best of anybody—except'n, of course, Papa and Gramma," she said contentedly.

"Renee—" Parris stumbled on her name. "This will always be a secret place, won't it?"

"Mmm."

He wished she had said more.

* * *

Parris watched his grandmother rather anxiously on Sunday mornings. If she planned to go to church she always gave orders at breakfast for the surry. Madame von Eln put down her coffee cup and folded her napkin.

"Gina, tell Uncle Henry to have the carriage ready at half-past

"Yes, Madame."

He sighed. It would be fun to go call Renee and build a dam in the little creek. Much more fun certainly than putting on a clean white waist and a starched collar and going to church.

The surry stood shining in the sun. Uncle Henry, his chocolate face wrinkled into Sunday decorum, sat on the front seat. He wore a blue-and-white-striped seersucker coat and a wide-brimmed straw hat.

Madame came down, crackling in her black taffeta dress. She was wearing her onyx-and-diamond earrings and a large brooch at her throat. She looked very fine, he thought, with her tight shiny black kid gloves, and the little spray of jet trimming that twinkled on her bonnet. He particularly liked that Sunday bonnet. He thought it looked like a crown, and that it made his grandmother look like a queen.

The second church bell was ringing from the Presbyterian tower when they turned into Federal street.

A number of men stood on the little lawn before the church. Several of them lifted their hats and spoke. Parris could see that they liked his grandmother from the respectful tone of the greetings. That was because she was an awfully important person, of course, the owner of the Burton County Nurseries, and a woman of affairs.

The inside of the Presbyterian church was most pleasant. It was very high, and tall slender windows of colored glass reached far up to the curved ceiling behind the graceful sweep of gallery. The windows were open today, and puffs of warm air came in.

Mrs Curley turned and smiled a subdued greeting to Madame van Eln, and the old banker turned also and bowed gravely sidewise.

Parris caught sight of Drake McHugh across the aisle with his aunt and uncle, Mrs. Livingstone and the Major. Drake leaned forward and made eager, unintelligible signs, but his aunt tapped on his knee with her gloved fingers and he subsided.

On the far side of the church, in the little-used north section of seats, Parris saw a gleam of copper curls. It was Cassandra and her mother. He couldn't remember ever having seen them at church before.

The service seemed interminable. Parris knew that Dr. Mackay preached exactly an hour, and he felt at the beginning of the sermon that he could not possibly bear it. Maybe he would get sick. That would be terrible. Everyone would look at him. He swallowed hard at the thought and wriggled desperately. Then he dozed.

He was startled by a stir and rustle. It sounded as loud as thunder. He opened his eyes. Then he flushed very red and sat looking into the depths of Mr. Curley's silk hat. He hoped no one had seen him asleep.

The whole congregation bowed and the lovely words of the benediction faded into a whispering cadence across their heads . . . "In the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, Amen."

Drake McHugh was squeezing through the outgoing crowd. "Parris!" The sibilant sound carried sharply. "Hist! Wait a minute outside, will you? I want to see you. Oh, good morn—good day, Madame. Uncle Rhodes and Aunt Mamie said could Parris stay in town and eat dinner with us and stay this afternoon?"

"Why certainly, if you want him to."

The group walked slowly out of church. "Now send him home if he bothers you," Madame smiled at the Livingstones.

* * *

The Livingstones lived near the Presbyterian church. Parris thought this must be very convenient and pleasant, but Drake did not regard it as an advantage.

Drake McHugh was an orphan, too, and lived with his aunt and uncle, both of whom were as old as Madame von Eln. Drake said that when he was 21 he would inherit his money. Parris had heard people say it was too bad that Drake had to grow up without parents. He could not imagine why they said this. He had no parents either and he was very happy. He often thought that it would be very strange to have a father and mother. He was sure he could never have loved either of them as much as he loved his grandmother. It would have been too bad, he decided, for her not to have had him all to herself.

After dinner Mrs. Livingstone retired for a nap, and the Major sat on the front porch smoking.

"C'mon, Parris, let's go down in the back where it's shady."

They sat on the grass, somewhat stunned with food, but making the effort at conversation which seemd always somewhat difficult on Sunday visits.

"I hate Sundays, don't you?" Drake threw a stick at a tall mullein stalk.

"Why?"

"Gee, they won't let me do nothing on Sunday." Drake seemed surprised that Parris shouldn't know this.

"Why not?"

"'Cause it's Sunday. Does your grandma let you play on Sunday?"

"Of course she does."

"Gee! They won't let me do one thing. Of course I slip off, but they don't know it. It's a sin — they say it is, anyhow. I don't see how it can hurt anything just to play."

"Me, neither. I'm glad my grandmother lets me play."

"Well, Aunt Mamie's gone to sleep. Uncle Rhodes'll be asleep pretty soon. Then we can slip off."

"Won't they get after you?"

"They won't know anything about it."

"Well, I guess it isn't any harm just going somewhere."

"'Course 'tain't. Gee, Parris, you're funny."

"How?"

"You always talk so proper."

Parris blushed. "It's the only way I can talk, Drake. You know I have to think when I speak English, and I guess it just goes kind of slow."

"Gosh, that's so. You do talk some other language, don't you?"

"German and French."

"It's funny for an American boy to be talking any other kind of talk but American."

Parris scraped at the ground with his heel. "Does — does it sound sissy, Drake the way I talk?"

"N-no—it don't sound sissy exactly. It just sounds like you're trying to be awful proper—kinder like you're puttin' on."

"Well, I ain't."

"Now, that's more like it—when you say 'ain't.'"

"But 'ain't' ain't — isn't really right."

"I don't care. Sounds better."

Parris laughed, but it was a halfhearted laugh. He wanted Drake to like him.

Drake jumped up. "Let's go."

"All right. Where?"

"Let's go down to the depot. I guess we'll find some of those lower-end-of-town kids and we can do something. They're tough, too," Drake added admiringly.

They walked on the shady side of the street and hurried from time to time through occasional stretches of sun where trees were missing.

"I guess this is the hottest day I ever saw." Drake stopped and wiped his face on his sleeve. A deep flush made his freckles stand out larger and darker than ever.

"So'd I, but the closest swimmin' hole is way down the creek. Too far, I guess. I tell you—let's go down to the Elroy's icehouse. We can play in there an' it's cool as everything. Gus Elroy's got a trapeze, and flyin' rings an' par'llel bars fixed up like a regular gymnasium."

"All right, come on then. Let's go fast."

They crossed to Walnut street and hurried toward the south end of town.

There was no one at the depot, or near it. Kings Row had no Sunday trains. The boxcars stood huge and solid-looking, as though nothing could ever move them. Everything lay baking in the pitiless sun.

Drake seemed more at home in these surroundings. He made knowing remarks, mentioning easily and carelessly the names of engineers and firemen, brakeman and flagmen. Parris was impressed. He felt very young and inexperienced.

SOCIETY & CLUBS

WESTINGHOUSE CLUB TO MEET THURSDAY

Mrs. Julia Kiene Will Demonstrate, Show Film on "Vitamized" Cooking; April Menus to Be Distributed.

WIVES and homemakers of Westinghouse employes will hold their second Health for Defense club meeting in the company's auditorium at 2:30 p. m. Thursday. Mrs. Julia Kiene, director of home economics for Westinghouse and originator of the nation's first active Health for Defense program, will be in charge.

Of the 375 wives and homemakers who attended the initial meeting on March 4, 320 of them returned within the next several days to fill in questionnaires and to receive the booklets of menus and recipes for healthful meals to be served during the month of March.

"Vitamized" cooking will be demonstrated by Mrs. Kiene at Thursday's meeting. All kinds of vegetables will be cooked with a minimum amount of water in order to conserve their vitamin content. In order to prove that expensive, new utensils are not necessary for good results, Mrs. Kiene will cook with all kinds of utensils at this meeting.

A technicolor movie showing the advantages of "Vitamized" cooking and the disadvantages of the old-fashioned method of cooking will be shown. The film is divided into two parts: "V-Men" shows laboratory experiments with the two methods of cooking; "V-Women" pictures a typical homemaker cooking the "Vitamized" way in her own kitchen.

It will not be necessary for Health for Defense club members to return to Westinghouse at some future date to secure their booklets of April menus and recipes. Distribution will take place at Thursday's meeting. Wives or homemakers of the company's employes, furloughed workers and men in service, who were unable to be present for the first meeting are urged to attend this one. A copy of the March booklet of plans for healthful meals will be presented them upon request.

Grant, East Second street, in a quiet ceremony on March 22 in the First Methodist church in this city. Rev. E. G. Corwin performed the service at 2:30 p. m., in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends of the couple. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

For her wedding the former Miss Kunkle was attired in a blue street length frock fashioned with a fitted bodice, V-neckline, and a full skirt. Her only jewelry was a gold necklace and bracelet, a gift of the bridegroom, and she wore a shoulder corsage of two white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Dale Swingler attended the couple. Mrs. Swingler wore a pale violet tailored dress with navy accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

Mrs. Elsie Ireland, organist, played nuptial music preceding and during the ceremony. Some of her selections were "I Love You Truly," "Serenade" by Schubert and the traditional wedding marches. Mrs. Kunkle appeared at her daughter's wedding in a dusty rose crepe tailored frock with navy blue accessories. Mrs. Grant was attired in a navy blue frock with white accessories.

Following the ceremony the couple left for a short wedding trip. For traveling the bride wore a rose tailored suit with navy blue accessories. BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

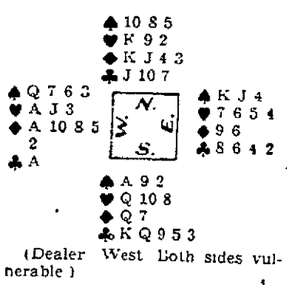
BY

Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHAT IS THE JOB TO DO?

WHEN you have a specific job to do anywhere in life, it is up to you to accomplish it if you can. In bridge that is represented by the contract in which you find yourself. If you are in a contract of four-odd in some suit, and you are, a gamester, you will concentrate all of our resources upon taking the necessary 10 tricks. If the contract, however, is only three-odd, then your first consideration should be to make sure of the necessary nine tricks, not going out of your way to risk being beaten for the sake of extras unless there are special reasons for doing so.



(Dealer West. Both sides vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1 ♦	Pass	Pass	2 ♣
Dbl	Pass	2 ♥	Pass
Pass	3 ♣

Follow this succession of tricks—diamond A, diamond 5 to the Q, club 3 to the A, heart 3 bringing the 2, 7 and 10 and club 5 to the J. Now you and I—and a kibitzer at the game—knowing West has the heart A, can see an easy way for South to make an extra trick, discarding both of his losing spades on the diamond K and J. He could overtake the club 10 with the K, use the Q to drop the last missing trump, then lead a heart toward the K. Thus he could surely get to the dummy to use the diamond honors for two spade discards, so that his only losing tricks would be one club, one heart and one diamond.

But South could not be sure West had the heart A. If he tried the given line of play and East held it, the dummy could never be re-entered to use the diamond honors at all, and hence there would be two spade losers. So, while in the dummy with the club J, he had to, as a safety play for the contract, lead the diamond K, letting East ruff and himself overruffing with the K. His next lead, of the club 9 to the 10 put him back into dummy, where he was able to use the diamond J for one spade discard. Of course, he then lost a spade and a heart, in addition to the two minor aces, so he made exactly 3-Clubs.

Perhaps we should give West a merit mark for his under-lead of the heart A to the fourth trick, which caused all of the trouble.

Essentially a deep-water dweller, the broadbill swordfish comes to the surface to satisfy its weakness for sunbaths.

Pitfalls of Love

(A sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I had breath for but one word in answer to the driver's assurance, so swift was the sweep of the big armored car around the shores of the beautiful mountain lake which he had told us was called Waramaug.

"Splendid!" I ejaculated, and then summoned my faculties for the instructions which I knew must be given to Gus before we reached Warren.

"Ask him, Gus," I said, "if there is any place in Warren where we can inquire about Thunder Mountain."

"Yes," he said, "there's a general store and gas station, and the man that keeps it knows everybody for 25 miles around."

"Tell him to stop there," I told Gus, "and then listen carefully, while I tell you what must be done."

Gus Gives Orders.

"Okay," Gus answered mechanically, and as mechanically gave Bill the direction I had given him. Then he turned to me inquiringly.

"In the first place Gus," I said, "I must not be seen at the store in Warren, nor must any of you speak to me. You must make the storekeeper believe that for your own reasons you wish to find Professor Diswell."

"Professor—" Gus began, and then stopped.

"I'll tell you about him presently," I said. "Now if you have any difficulty with the storekeeper, show him your Federal badge, pledge him to secrecy, and then get your information.

"On second thought," I said, "you would better show him your badge in the beginning.

Must Demand Secrecy.

"Tell him, I went on, "that your chief wishes certain information which only the old professor can give him, but that your visit to him must be kept secret; that he must mention it to nobody.

"Impress that on him, and"—I hesitated, then went on firmly—"you would better tell him that another armored car which you suspect, but do not know has passengers who are enemies of the government, will probably stop at the store and inquire for Professor Diswell. They will also ask about us. Tell him to profess ignorance of Professor Diswell's whereabouts, or better still send them in an opposite direction."

Gus Has Good Memory.

I told myself, when he had finished his almost parrot-like repetition, that in Gus a good memory was added to his other valuable qualities.

"Good work!" I commended when he had finished. "Now, one last instruction.

"There may be danger if we meet the occupants of that other armored car down at the professor's house. You would better tell the storekeeper that if we come back past his store without stopping, but with the driver sounding his horn and you and Bill waving wildly from the windows, he is to call the state police and have them follow along whichever road we turn into."

Says Spencer Would Agree.

Gus nodded his head in agreement.

"I think your father would say 'okay' to that," he said, "though he usually wants to keep away from cops if he can. But this would be different."

"Yes, it would," I said. "Now I will tell you about Professor Diswell. He is a very old man who lives alone except for a servant. I used to know him well and I am sure that he will talk to me. I will try to get through with the conversation as fast as I can, and we have already arranged what you and I are to do if there is danger. Now I want to be sure that nobody sees me from now until we get to Professor Diswell's home. I would better be down again, I suppose."

HOROSCOPE

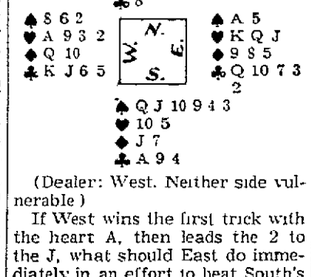
For Wednesday, March 25.

Although this may be a day of very lively activity, initiative and fair progress, yet this success will have to be the result of personal application, determination and strenuous enterprise since there is little to be expected from superiors, employers or others higher up. In fact there may be definite antagonism from them, but this should not be resisted by impetuous, offensive measures.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an unusually lively and aggressive day, with some opportunity for accomplishment of high objectives but by personal cleverness and initiative rather than the encouragement or concrete support of influential personages. In fact, there may be unlooked for opposition from such quarters, but handle the situation with finesse and compromise and not impetuosity or strife.

A child born on this day should be exceptionally talented, versatile and efficient, but its impetuosity, or high nervous tension may provoke those from whom it expects co-operation.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

If West wins the first trick with the heart A, then leads the 2 to the J, what should East do immediately in an effort to beat South's 4-Spades?

KINGS ROW + + + + +

By Henry Bellamann

(Copyright, 1942)

THE STORY: Smalltown Kings Row schoolmates are orphaned Parris Mitchell, 12, who adores his French grandmother, Madame von Eln; pretty Renee, daughter of von Eln estate overseer; "all boy" Drake McHugh; beautiful Cassandra Tower, whose recluse doctor father is town mystery; Louise Gordon, daughter of leading physician. Other characters: lawyer Colonel Skeffington, banker Curley, editor Miles Jackson. Cassandra plans birthday party, social power Mrs. Gordon decides Louise shall have one same day, Cassie's party a failure. Her father withdraws her from school.

CHAPTER IV

After what seemed an interminable spring season, vacation came at last. Parris and Renee ran nearly all the way home. This afternoon was different, somehow, from other afternoons—it was larger, brighter, gayer. And tomorrow there would be no school.

The great sweeps of orchard back of the house were in full bloom.

"Let's go look at the apple trees, Renee. Come on, hurry up."

"All right," she answered meekly, matching her step to his as best she could.

He dashed about the orchards like something mad, gathering the low branches into his arms and making loud inhalations as if he tried to breathe them into himself.

"Aren't they bee-eautiful, Renee? Prettier'n last year."

The months of May and June were rapturously happy. The days were all blue and gold and none of them failed of novelty or excitement. July came in hot and dry.

They walked one afternoon through the groves of young evergreens that stood on the farthest outskirts of the place. Beyond, there was only woods.

They came presently upon a small green pond with spruces and cedars planted in a wide circle about it. The sharp points of the young trees were perfectly mirrored on the still surface.

"Ooh, looky—our pond! We ain't been here since last summer, have we?" Renee ran ahead.

Parris walked slowly forward, watching her bright hair as she flung the braids back over her shoulders and sat on the grassy bank with hands clasped about her knees. He decided she was a very pretty girl—prettier than anybody — prettier, even, than Cassandra Tower.

"You're my best friend, Renee," he said impulsively.

"Am I? Honestly?"

"Yes, you are. I like you better'n anybody."

"I like you best of anybody—exceptin', of course, Papa and Mama," she said contentedly.

"Renee—" Parris stumbled on the name. "This will always be our secret place, won't it?"

"Mmm."

He wished she had said more.

* * *

Parris watched his grandmother rather anxiously on Sunday mornings. If she planned to go to church she always gave orders at breakfast for the surry.

Madame von Eln put down her coffee cup and folded her napkin. "Anna, tell Uncle Henry to have the carriage ready at half-past 10."

"Yes, Madame."

He sighed. It would be fun to call Renee and build a dam in the little creek. Much more fun certainly than putting on a clean white waist and a starched collar and going to church.

The surry stood shining in the sun. Uncle Henry, his chocolate face wrinkled into Sunday decorum, sat on the front seat. He wore a blue-and-white-striped seersucker coat and a wide-brimmed straw hat.

Madame came down, crackling in her black taffeta dress. She was wearing her onyx-and-diamond earrings and a large brooch at her throat. She looked very fine, he thought, with her light shiny black kid gloves, and the little spray of jet trimming that twinkled on her bonnet. He particularly liked that Sunday bonnet. He thought it looked like a crown, and that it made his grandmother look like a queen.

The second church bell was ringing from the Presbyterian tower when they turned into Federal street.

A number of men stood on the little lawn before the church. Several of them lifted their hats and spoke. Parris could see that they liked his grandmother from the respectful tone of the greetings. That was because she was an awfully important person, of course, the owner of the Burton County Nurseries, and a woman of affairs.

The inside of the Presbyterian church was most pleasant. It was very high, and tall slender windows of colored glass reached far up to the curved ceiling behind the graceful sweep of gallery. The windows were open today, and puffs of warm air came in.

Mrs. Curley turned and smiled a subdued greeting to Madame van Eln, and the old banker turned also and bowed gravely sidewise.

Parris caught sight of Drake McHugh across the aisle with his aunt and uncle, Mrs. Livingstone and the Major. Drake leaned forward and made eager, unintelligible signs, but his aunt tapped on his knee with her gloved fingers and he subsided.

On the far side of the church, in the little-used north section of seats, Parris saw a gleam of copper curls. It was Cassandra and her mother. He couldn't remember ever having seen them at church before.

The service seemed interminable. Parris knew that Dr. Mackay preached exactly an hour, and he felt at the beginning of the sermon that he could not possibly bear it. Maybe he would get sick. That would be terrible. Everyone would look at him. He swallowed hard at the thought and wriggled desperately. Then he dozed.

He was startled by a stir and rustle. It sounded as loud as thunder. He opened his eyes. Then he flushed very red and sat looking into the depths of Mr. Curley's silk hat. He hoped no one had seen him asleep.

The whole congregation bowed and the lovely words of the benediction faded into a whispering cadence across their heads . . . "In the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, Amen."

Drake McHugh was squeezing through the outgoing crowd. "Parris!" The sibilant sound carried sharply. "Hist! Wait a minute outside, will you? I want to see you. Oh, good morn—good day, Madame. Uncle Rhodes and Aunt Mamie said could Parris stay in town and eat dinner with us and stay this afternoon?"

"Why certainly, if you want him to."

The group walked slowly out of church. "Now send him home if he bothers you," Madame smiled at the Livingstones.

* * *

The Livingstones lived near the Presbyterian church. Parris thought this must be very convenient and pleasant, but Drake did not regard it as an advantage.

Drake McHugh was an orphan, too, and lived with his aunt and uncle, both of whom were as old as Madame von Eln. Drake said that when he was 21 he would inherit his money. Parris had heard people say it was too bad that Drake had to grow up without parents. He could not imagine why they said this. He had no parents either and he was very happy. He often thought that it would be very strange to have a father and mother. He was sure he could never have loved either of them as much as he loved his grandmother. It would have been too bad, he decided, for her not to have had him all to herself.

After dinner Mrs. Livingstone retired for a nap, and the Major sat on the front porch smoking.

"C'mon, Parris, let's go down in the back where it's shady."

They sat on the grass, somewhat stunned with food, but making the effort at conversation which seemd always somewhat difficult on Sunday visits.

"I hate Sundays, don't you?" Drake threw a stick at a tall mullein stalk.

"Why?"

"Gee, they won't let me do nothing on Sunday." Drake seemed surprised that Parris shouldn't know this.

"Why not?"

"'Cause it's Sunday. Does your grandma let you play on Sunday?"

"Of course she does."

"Gee! They won't let me do one thing. Of course I slip off, but they don't know it. It's a sin—they say it is, anyhow. I don't see how it can hurt anything just to play."

"Me, neither. I'm glad my grandmother lets me play."

"Well, Aunt Mamie's gone to sleep. Uncle Rhodes'll be asleep pretty soon. Then we can slip off."

"Won't they get after you?"

"They won't know anything about it."

"Well, I guess it isn't any harm just going somewhere."

"'Course 'tain't. Gee, Parris, you're funny."

"How?"

"You always talk so proper."

Parris blushed. "It's the only way I can talk, Drake. You know I have to think when I speak English, and I guess it just goes kind of slow."

"Gosh, that's so. You do talk some other language, don't you?"

"German and French."

"It's funny for an American boy to be talking any other kind of talk but American."

Parris scraped at the ground with his heel. "Does—does it sound sissy, Drake the way I talk?"

"N-no—it don't sound sissy exactly. It just sounds like you're trying to be awful proper—kinder like you're puttin' on."

"Well, I ain't."

"Now, that's more like it—when you say 'ain't.'"

"But 'ain't' ain't—isn't really right."

"I don't care. Sounds better."

Parris laughed, but it was a halfhearted laugh. He wanted Drake to like him.

Drake jumped up. "Let's go."

"All right. Where?"

"Let's go down to the depot. I guess we'll find some of those lower-end-of-town kids and we can do something. They're tough, too," Drake added admiringly.

They walked on the shady side of the street and hurried from time to time through occasional stretches of sun where trees were missing.

"I guess this is the hottest day I ever saw." Drake stopped and wiped his face on his sleeve. A deep flush made his freckles stand out larger and darker than ever.

"I'd like to go swimming." Parris sounded almost wistful.

"So'd I, but the closest swimmin' hole is way down the creek. Too far, I guess. I tell you—let's go down to the Elroy's icehouse. We can play in there an' it's cool as everything. Gus Elroy's got a trapeze, and flyin' rings an' par'llel bars fixed up like a regular gymnasium."

"All right, come on then. Let's go fast."

They crossed to Walnut street and hurried toward the south end of town.

There was no one at the depot, or near it. Kings Row had no Sunday trains. The boxcars stood huge and solid-looking, as though nothing could ever move them. Everything lay baking in the pitiless sun.

Drake seemed more at home in these surroundings. He made knowing remarks, mentioning easily and carelessly the names of engineers and firemen, brakeman and flagmen. Parris was impressed. He felt very young and inexperienced.

Cleaning out the desk in preparation for a new sports season. This is something that happens every once in a great while. To make room for a new conglomeration of junk.

Actually this is just cleaning out one drawer of the desk. I'll save the other five until the spring house cleaning mood hits again. So, up we go with the drawer, turn it upside down, and begin separating stuff into keepers, temporary keepers, and the old heave-ho.

Toledo Battles Vikings

Tyger Conquerors Have Tough Tournament Foe.

By JOHN CARR
(INS Sports Writer)

TOLEDO Central Catholic cagers will have to climb over a couple of towering Vikings in the last stretch for the Class A high school basketball crown which awaits the winner of the championship finals Saturday at Kent.

Akron North was paired with Toledo to open the semi-finals at 2 p. m. on the Willis gymnasium hardwoods of Kent State university. Canton Lehman and Xenia Central will team off in the second clash at 3:15, with the two winners returning to the gym at 8:15 to determine the heir to the Class A basketball throne vacated by Martins Ferry.

* * *

Two lads in the Akron North line-up have been a pillar of strength for the Vikings this season by their sheer height. Leo Sadowski, a guard, tapers off on the yardstick at six feet five inches, while his rangy mate, Joe Kelly, Center, stands six feet seven inches.

* * *

Both cagers have given Akron North domination of the ball in the play under the basket frequently enough to rate as one of the big factors in the Vikings' successful record of 23 victories against one defeat.

In the regional playoffs at Denison, Sadowski looped in 31 points in the two games for the team's highest individual scoring honors as Akron North defeated Greenfield McClain and Cambridge.

North, which has made three trips to the state basketball meet and returned with the championship in 1935 and 1939, stands in the path of Toledo Central's bid to become the first Catholic high school to wear the crown.

Central made an unsuccessful attempt in 1934 but the current edition will go into battle with a season's record of 28 wins and two losses. Although the caliber of competition has not been as rugged as Akron North's schedule, Toledo has won the greater majority of their contests by more decisive scores.

* * *

Exhibiting that last minute "staying power," the sign of a champ, Toledo Central first nosed out Celina in the regionals 46 to 45 and repeated the same punch to snare a thrilling victory over Mansfield, 36 to 34.

* * *

Xenia Central, on a par with Akron North with a similar record of 23 wins and one loss, will tackle Canton Lehman, the counterpart to Somerset—the new Class B champs—hoping that the old charm of the "third time never fails" will produce the coveted laurels for the first time in the school's history.

In the opening round of the 1938 meet, Xenia lost to New Philadelphia which advanced all the way to the finals before succumbing to Newark. Last year Xenia treked to Columbus, but was eliminated by Martins Ferry in the semi-finals.

With the memory of how an underdog Somerset team fought its way to the championship at Springfield, the case of Canton Lehman presents a similar situation. The Polar Bears entered the Youngstown regional with a season's slate of 14 victories and seven defeats, the poorest of the 16 Class A finalists.

Included in the win column, however, are two verdicts over Canton McKinley, a strong pre-tourney favorite, and Youngstown East, the 1942 local champs, two of the four seeded entries in the district tournament.

* * *

Canton Lehman gained the Kent State berth by a 28 to 20 defeat of Lakewood, one of the two repeating district titlists, and a 47 to 37 victory over Warren Harding, which dumped Canton Timken (19-1) in the district tourney.

* * *

The "big four" are coached by Buckeye college graduates. Jim Snyder, mentor of Canton Lehman, is a graduate of Ohio university; Luther Hosfield, Akron North, hails from Oberlin; Tom Blackburn, Xenia Central, comes from Wilmington, and Adolph Tscherne, Toledo Central Catholic, is an alumnus of Dayton university.

SAYS PRO GRIDDERS WILL RETAIN CLASS

CHICAGO—(AP)—Elmer Layden, commissioner of professional football, said the demands of military service should make no appreciable difference in the caliber of competition in professional football next season.

Normal operations, designed to provide relaxation for the fans in time of stress, are planned for the league, he added.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

NEW YORK—(Wide World)—If your calendar isn't enough proof that spring is here, what's become of all those ball players who were holdouts a couple of weeks ago? . . Training camp scribes are doing their raving about rookies now, and when they're forgotten the season will be on . . . The P.G.A., which will run the only national golf championship this year, is having trouble finding a sponsor who can put up enough dough--and the event is scheduled for May . . . Commodore Sheldon Clark, head of the Illinois boxing commission, has okayed Lou Nova as an opponent for Bob Pastor.

Although the possibility of a night baseball ban worried southern promoters most of the winter, Auburn went ahead and scheduled four night football games for 1942 . . . Young Duke Blasts Maples

High School Grid Star Leads Club Bowlers.

Young Duke Weber, Mansfield high school all-Ohio football guard, doesn't need to try to fill the shoes of Papa Duke, or even of Brother Nick when he setps on the bowling alleys.

Last night he led the Club league at Colony lanes with a 653 total on games of 173-247-233, and is now ready to give lessons to the Weber elders.

J. Smith rolled high game of 268, and American Legion again walked away with team honors on a 1021 game and 2791 total. Smith had a 614 total, G. Hall 625, and Frick 601

HARTLEY DECIDES TO QUIT AT FINDLAY

FINDLAY—(AP)—President Joe Donnellly, president of the Ohio State baseball league, indicated today it would be several days before a decision was reached on whether Findlay would continue in the circuit. Grover Hartley, present owner, has announced he will not continue operations. An effort is being made to form a syndicate here to continue operation of the club.

Coast Keglers Bid For ABC

Los Angeles Bowlers Arrive For Tourney.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Bidding for the 1944 American Bowling Congress tournament took a spirited turn today with arrival of west coast delegations.

Los Angeles keglers, led by movie comedian Harold Lloyd, and a group from San Francisco let it be known they were competitors of Indianapolis envoys for the classic. Next year's tournament will be in Buffalo, N. Y.

* * *

Most of the shouting attended initial closed meetings of the ABC executive committee. Awarding of the 1944 tournament is looked for Friday at the open meeting of delegates who will consider committee recommendations.

* * *

On the agenda are three proposed changes in operation of the mandatory city tournaments.

One would lift the 20-mile limit for membership in an association to permit it to include bowlers in neighboring cities regardless of distance. It came from the St. Louis Bowling association.

Edwin M. Wildey of Rochester, N. Y., suggested that associations within a 50-mile radius be permitted to conduct sectional meets and the Buffalo organization proposed shelving its city tournament when the national event is rolled there.

Other proposals include: Changing measurements of kickboards and sideboards; simplification of the foul definition; two "alleymen" of a five-man team instead of one as at present; paring authority of team captains, and a plan to prohibit gamblers from sponsoring teams.

During yesterday's matches the only major standings' change was posted by Larry Jensen, 35-year-old bowling alley operator of Woodstock, Ill., who placed third in the singles with 710.

Change In Tourney Setup Considered

Possible "Big League" Meet Would Include Mansfield Tygers

By JAMES EMERSON

COLUMBUS—(UP)—Member schools of the Ohio High School Athletic association are almost certain to ballot later this year on whether to continue separation of the Class A and B state basketball tournaments enforced upon the association this winter.

Several factors will be involved in the final decision and there is always the chance that unfavorable war influences may wipe the tourney off the books entirely next year.

* * *

One big factor will be the final aggregate of gate receipts from the split state tourney setup imposed when the American Bowling Congress shoved the combined A and B classics from their long-time "home" in the state fairgrounds coliseum at Columbus.

* * *

Unofficial returns show disappointing receipts at the Class B playoffs held at Springfield last Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Commissioner H. R. Townsend of the OHSAA said the Springfield receipts would be between $5,000 and $5,500. This will mean a sharp cut in the bonus "gravy" of $2,550 over and above expenses collected by the 16 clubs in the 1941 meet at Columbus.

Reports are still lacking on cash taken in at the four Class A regional tourneys last week-end and the Class A finals, which likely will attract two capacity houses of 5,500 each at Kent State university, are yet to be played.

But Townsend is extremely doubtful if the overall Class A and B total will come close to the record $18,106 grossed at the three-day Columbus finals last March.

Of course, there is a good argument to be made on whether it is fair to compare this year with last under any setup in view of tire and transportation restrictions brought on by the war emergency. If this situation gets no better, it may be an important influence in keeping the tourneys split up next year even to the extent of instituting regional playoffs for the Class B teams.

* * *

Still a new factor may enter the tournament picture before long. The shifting population scene and sudden growth of many schools is increasing sentiment for creation of a third intermediate tournament division for schools who feel outclassed by the "big leaguers" such as the big-enrollment Akron, Canton, Cincinnati, Columbus, Toledo, Dayton, Mansfield, Massillon, Steubenville and others. The present dividing line between Classes A and B is 150 boys but many schools have in excess of 800 boys.

* * *

All of these angles will figure in the final decision on a 1942 tournament. Even if there is a majority decision to restore the old combined 32-team classic, it may be impossible to find a suitable "home." Townsend feels certain the government will be using the fairgrounds coliseum for war purposes by next March.

Whatever the tournament setup, Townsend believes the association control board will adopt a universal "seeding" plan on basis of season records for all county and district playoffs.

The "luck of the draw" arrangement now in effect in most tournaments too often results in two strong teams meeting in the first round. The prime example was Martins Ferry vs. Tiltonsville in the eastern district's first round earlier this month.

Harder Signs Tribe Contract

Veteran's Comeback Gets Fine Start.

CLEARWATER, Fla.—(AP)—For old times' sake and for the help he can give their hurling staff this year, the Cleveland Indians were glad to have Mel Harder back on the official roster today.

The 32-year-old right hander's comeback was made official with the signing of a conditional contract under which he will be paid according to the number of games he wins.

* * *

Harder's arm failed him last season, his 14th with Cleveland—the only major league club he ever pitched for—and in midseason he underwent an operation for removal of bone chips from his elbow. At the end of the season he was given his unconditional release.

* * *

But neither the club nor Harder wanted his career to end. He accompanied the Tribe to its training camp this spring as a free agent

Colorful Musical.

"Louisiana Purchase," the song and dance film in technicolor now showing at the Ohio presents Bob Hope, Vera Zorina, the dancer, and Victor Moore, comedian of stage and screen in a colorful version of the stage success by the same name. New Orleans serves as the locale of the story which concerns the comic activities of a political band, whose innocent dupe, Bob Hope, finally wises up to their activities. He hires the services of a beautiful French dancer, Miss Zorina, to turn the tables on his former henchman by compromising a visiting senator, played by Victor Moore, which she does with the aid of Irene Bordoni.

* * *

Air Raid Thriller.

"Pacific Blackout," opening at the Madison tomorrow, was started before Pearl Harbor was bombed and rushed to completion afterwards. Featuring Robert Preston and Martha O'Driscoll the picture shows how fifth columnists can climb into high defense posts and thereby be of invaluable help to the enemy. Civilian defense authorities were consulted during the filming of the picture that depicts air raid wardens, gas decontamination crews and firemen and auxiliary policemen in action. Eva Gabor and Philip Merivale and Thurston Hall are in the cast. Jane Withers in "Young America," is the co-feature.

* * *

Murder Mystery.

An entertaining murder mystery, "The Night of January 16th," starting Wednesday at the Ritz presents Ellen Drew and Robert Preston in a swift-moving story in which Miss Drew is accused of murdering the head of a gigantic firm. The murdered man had looted the firm of millions of dollars. The girl, aided by Preston, determines to be her own sleuth. Nils Asther, Clarence Kolb and Cecil Kellaway are in the cast. Nat Pendleton is featured in "Jail House Blues," the second picture.

* * *

Romantic Story.

Merle Oberon has the starring role in "Lydia," the attraction opening Wednesday at the Park. She appears as a Boston debutante at the turn of the century and the story deals with the four men who sought her hand. George Cotten has the part of the doctor, George Reeves, a football player, Hans Yaray as the blind concert pianist, and Alan Marshal as a naval officer, Lydia's last and greatest love. Roy Rogers in "Red River Valley," the second attraction, is a musical western with a modern setting.

2—Card of Thanks

WITH REGARD TO A CARD OF THANKS

Very often a Card of Thanks in The News-Journal meets a need which can hardly be solved in any other way. Not only is it a gracious expression of gratitude to those who have sent floral tributes, but also courteously acknowledges the service and kindness of the many to whom a personal note of thanks cannot well be mailed, or whose names or addresses are not known.

A "Card of Thanks" can now be arranged by telephone: Dial 4251-6, ask for Miss Lane or Miss Stone, either will be glad to render whatever service and advice you need.

PORTLAND, Ore. —(U.P.)— Bob Leute will be remembered by basketball fans as the Idaho collegian who, back in 1934, sank an 80-foot toss, but Bob confesses it was an accident.

"It was really a rotten play," he grins.

"Believe it or not, I wasn't aiming at the basket, but at my teammate, Walter Carte, who was standing under the rim. I just threw too high, and bingo—I was the most surprised guy on the floor."

WESTINGHOUSE DIPS TO NEW LOW FOR YEAR

Heavy Buying Takes Edge Off of Market Trends, Some Issues Get Support.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Continued heavy buying of secondary railway bonds tended to take the edge off today's stock market trends.

Stocks given a little early support included U. S. Steel, Chrysler, American Telephone, Phelps Dodge, Cerro De Pasco, General Electric, Dow Chemical, Eastman Kodak, Southern Pacific Pennsylvania and Chesapeake & Ohio

Westinghouse dipped to a new year's low. Inclined to backwardness also were Bethlehem, American Smelting, DuPont, Montgomery Ward, Texas Co., Standard Oil (N. J.) and Johns-Manville.

The war news still was without much influence on speculative and investment sentiment, growing demand for carrier loans, notably those in the defaulted class. was attributed to the thought the railways would escape heavy taxation because of their large indebtedness.

Boardrooms found further confirmation of the sweep of industry in another sharp jump in business loans of federal reserve member banks in 101 cities. For the week ended March 16 this lending aggregate rose $76,000,000 to $7,035,000,000. or $1,621,000,000 above the comparable period last year. Principal increases were shown by New York with $30,000,000, San Francisco $16,000,000, Chicago $12,000,000 and Boston $10,000,000.

INVADING HORDES DEFY U. S.

Without the aid of armies or movies, the dandelion has managed to land on every part of the civilized world and possess the soil. It has even found its way into the famous World's Tonic Says Mrs Gertrude Major 989 Kenneth St., Coshocton, O My head used to get all stuffy and spots would float in front of my eyes. In the morning I was seldom able to eat breakfast and most half the day would be gone before I felt able to get around properly But relief of constipation with World's Tonic, took these resulting ailments away."
